

It was a bright and sunny day. The sun was blazing down onto the hot sandy beach where noisy boats were chugging away. Seagulls screeched noisily as they were flapping their wings near the dangerous, rocky cliffs. Two men were standing on the top of the cliff getting ready to jump.

"I'm really terrified"! yelled John.

"You can do it – it's a once in a life time thing; think of all the money you spent," replied David encouragingly.

"Yes, I shouldn't be afraid. I have to..."

John and David had to put their parachute on tightly and carefully so when they jumped the parachute wouldn't fall off. Then they swooped through the air trying to land on the sandy beach. John was still petrified. Was he going to die? ✓

"That was like getting ^{thrown} into a shark's mouth and getting eaten," John yelled enthusiastically after the jump.
